

Disney Citizenship Spotlight

Spring 2017

We're Pleased to Share Disney's 2016 Citizenship Data Table

2016 was another great year for Disney Citizenship. We made encouraging progress towards goals we set for ourselves back in 2012, meeting a few of our targets earlier than anticipated. We did this through innovative thinking, collaboration, and the support of cast members and fans alike.

This year's Citizenship Data Table illustrates the progress we continue to make to act ethically and responsibly, as well as promote the happiness and well-being of kids and families.

We believe that the example we set as a company of more than 195,000 employees is just one way we can have an impact; another way we can have an impact is inspiring the millions of kids and families we reach every day to take action and make a difference.

We appreciate your interest in our efforts and are proud to share a few highlights of our accomplishments featured in our 2016 Citizenship Data Table. We have highlighted three examples below.

Continued Progress Towards our Environmental Targets

In 2013 we introduced updated environmental targets for our emissions, waste, and potable water use. As of 2016, we remain on track to meet our 2020 targets for emissions and waste reduction and our 2018 target for potable water use. And last April we were very proud to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Disney Conservation Fund with an announcement of the fund's new focus to Reverse the Decline of at-risk wildlife and Increase the Time kids and families spend in nature. Met our Supply Chain Targets Early

Disney-branded products are produced in over 34,000 facilities in approximately 100 countries. In 2012, we announced ambitious targets to increase our visibility into the vast network of facilities that produce Disney-branded products; we understand that visibility is critical for advancing labor standards in our supply chain. We are proud to announce that we met our target related to ensuring labor compliance on 100% of the facilities producing Disney-branded products in high-risk countries and we achieved this goal earlier than anticipated.
