How does Disney measure the environmental footprint of its supply chain?
Many Disney business units have individual environmental initiatives to address the various elements of the product life cycle. Our company-wide targets are focused on two areas in particular; the sourcing of raw materials, especially as it relates to sustainable paper use; and holding our manufacturing suppliers to a higher standard of environmental responsibility. In fiscal year 2011, strategic suppliers of key Disney product lines completed an Environmental Responsibility Index survey that will serve as a baseline for measuring future improvements in the supply chain.
